From Our Director's Desk:

The 1965 Vatican II Proclamation is considered a theological landmark, signifying a dramatic turn in the Catholic Church's conception of Jews and of the role of Judaism in history. It is thus with great pride that our Center, committed for decades to interfaith studies and to providing a forum for public discourse, will offer a unique conference with outstanding scholars this fall to our students and community. Please join us on November 10, 2015, to celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of Vatican II (also known as "Nostra Aetate," in our time) and learn of its great significance to the Jewish community worldwide, the Catholic faith, other Christian denominations, the world of ideas at large, as well as to the universal pursuit of religious tolerance and understanding in our own times.

Professor Nehama Aschkenasy

recently contributed two articles to the Encyclopedia of the Bible and Its Reception (Berlin, de Gruyter) and is currently writing five more, in the categories of “literature” and “Judaism.” Appearing soon: “Israeli Fiction and the National Identity,” in Fred Greenspahn, ed., New Scholarship on Israel (New York University Press, 2015) and “Reversing the Aqeda: The Biblical and the Mystical in David Grossman’s To the End of the Land,” in Helen Leneman and Barry Walfish, eds., The Bible Re-told in Jewish Art, Literature, Music, and Film (Sheffield Phoenix Press, 2015). Her award-winning book, Eve’s Journey: Feminine Images in Hebraic Literary Tradition, was selected by University of Pennsylvania Press to be reprinted in hardcover and as eBook, in celebration of the Press’ 125th Anniversary.

Professor Beth Ginsberg

pecializes in the intersection of race, ethnicity, religion and voting. She is particularly interested in the impact of race on turnout. She is currently working on a research project that is an empirical study of the electoral behavior of Latino voters throughout the 2000s. She teaches a wide range of courses in American politics, including a popular Religion and Politics course that helps students understand the impact religion and religious beliefs have on the US political system. Professor Ginsberg also serves as faculty advisor to the Political Affairs Club located on the Stamford campus. This fall she will serve as moderator for the Center’s post-conference program, “Lunch and Conversation: A Follow-up Dialogue on the Annual Conference.”

Professor Joel Blatt

continues to research and write a book on “The Assassination of Carlo and Nello Rosselli.” He recently taught The Western Civilization survey course from the Renaissance and Reformation until the Present, the History of the Holocaust, Twentieth Century Europe, and a course on Italian Fascism and Italian Antifascism. This past spring he served as the faculty supervisor for the final phases of two Honor’s Theses. He was also selected by the students to be the recipient of the Outstanding Faculty Award. During the current Fall semester, he is teaching the Western Civilization survey and a course on Personality and Power during the Twentieth Century.

Professor Fred Roden

has just completed co-editing Uranism and Unisexuality, an edition/translation of a groundbreaking 1896 work by Jewish sexologist Marc-Andre Raffalovich. It will be published in November 2015 by Palgrave Macmillan. He spent the summer finishing his book entitled Recovering Jewishness: Modern Identities Reclaimed, which will be published in 2016. This Fall he is teaching his popular seminar on spiritual autobiography, which will include a guest lecture by poet and Yeshiva University professor Joy Ladin, author of Through the Door of Life: A Jewish Journey Between Genders. This fall he received the Faculty Recognition Award for the UConn-Stamford campus.

SPOTLIGHT ON OUR NEW ADVISORY COMMITTEE MEMBERS

Ron Goldstein, an MBA from Wharton with a career in Finance, has audited several courses at UConn-Stamford since retiring, including many with Professors Aschkenasy and Blatt, as well as attended the Center’s various outreach programs.

Cheryl May, an MBA in Finance, retired from a career in Insurance and has been a loyal student of the Center’s Lunch and Learn and Annual Conference, while also serving in many volunteer capacities for the Center’s various activities.

Marina Sapir, a native of Moscow, is a recipient of the Center’s Certificate in Judaic & Middle Eastern Studies and a long-time volunteer. She was also presented with the Frances and Irving Seliger Memorial Award for her paper in the Holocaust course.

We are sad to inform you that Mark Sternlicht, who had recently rejoined our Community Advisory Committee along with his wife, Harriet Sternlicht, passed away as our newsletter was going to print. Mark was a pillar of the Stamford Jewish community for many years, serving on the Board of Trustees of Bi-Cultural Day School and as President of Congregation Agudath Shalom. Mark and Harriet spent many hours volunteering at Agudath Shalom and Bi-Cultural, and they were both on the Founding Board of the Center for Judaic & Middle Eastern Studies at UConn-Stamford in 1980. May his memory be a blessing.
